

ATTITUTDES TOWARDS CHIROPRACTIC CARE AMONG HEALTHCARE COMMUNITY IN GHANA, AFRICA

Principal Investigator: Dana Madigan, B.S.
Faculty Sponsor: Barbara M. Sullivan, Ph.D.

The aim of the project is to interview healthcare providers that are participating in a medical mission trip to Ghana to learn about the current utilization patterns of the healthcare system in place in Ghana, if there is a perceived need for chiropractic care and how this need can best be met. The project is part of the Mentored Research Program in partnership with the University of Illinois School of Public Health.

Funding: National Institutes of Health, National Center for Complementary and Alternative Medicine
